DEATHS

MRS. W. M. HANCOCK

Mrs. Matilda LeGrand Hancock, wife of the late Walter Martin Hancock, passed away at her home here Saturday, October 2. Mrs. Hancock was a descendent of pioneer families of this and Charlotte County, being the daughter of Sarah Anne Smith and Thomas Edward LeGrand, and granddaughter of A. A. LeGrand, one of the organizers and the first clerk of Liberty Baptist Church. Her father, Thomas E. LeGrand, along with several brothers, volunteered in the Confederate Army. "Because of his bravery and proficiency he was promoted to the office of Lieutenant" (quote from Times-Virginian of March 4, 1903).

Mrs. Hancock joined the church which her grandfather helped organize at an early age and in this church was married to Mr. Hancock, a descendant of several of the oldest families of Charlotte County.Mr. and Mrs. Hancock built their home here soon after their marriage and have contributed much to the growth and development of the town and community.

Mrs. Hancock is survived by five daughters and one son: Mrs. Walter W. Scott of Appomattox; Mrs. W. F. Woolfork of Petersburg; Miss Annie Hancock of Lynchburg and Appomattox; Mrs. Paul S. Drinkard E. Hancock, and Mrs. Watkins M. Abbitt, all of Appomattox; by the following grandchildren: Mrs. Nancy Scott Goode of Lynchburg, William F. Woolfork, Jr. of Petersburg; Walter E. Hancock, Jr., Anne Watkins Jr. and Rinne Abbitt of Appomattox; one great-grandchild, Susan Virginia Goode of Lynchburg. She is also survived by two brothers and two sisters: Mrs. Manie S. Kelley and Luther B. LeGrand of Lynchburg; Mrs. W. D. Mason of Rice, and W. J. LeGrand of Appomattox.

Funeral services were held at 11 A. M. October 4 in Liberty Baptist Church, of which she was one of the oldest members, with interment in Liberty cemetery. Her pastor, Dr. Carl A. Collins, Jr., conducted the services, assisted by two former pastors of her church, Dr. W. M. Thompson of Middleburg, Virginia and Dr. V. W. Sears of Clifton Forge. Honorary pallbearers were the Deacons of her church and flower bearers were members of the Woman's Missionary Society. Active pallbearers were: Charles T. Moses, Alfred R. Harwood, Jr; George F. Abbitt, Jr., Alfred Lawson, and four of her nephews, Ned LeGrand of Appomattox; Luther B. LeGrand Jr., and William A. Kelley of Lynchburg, and Charles L. Mason of Crewe.

DR. SIMKINS ON LEAVE

Farmville, Va., Oct. 6.- Dr. Francis B. Simkins, professor of history at Longwood College has been appointed senior visiting fellow on the Council of Humanities at Princeton University, where he is filling a visiting lectureship for the American Civilization Program this semester. He is at present on leave of absence from Longwood College.

The Council of Humanities was set up this fall to strengthen the humanistic aspects of education and has been underwritten for the first years by the Carnegie Foundation of New York. The program of the twelve-man council calls for renewed stress on the teacher - scholar concept in advanced education, extension of integrated plans of study, and expansion of graduate fellowships and research resources.

A noted authority on the South, Dr. Simkins was asked to conduct a conference on "The Changing South" with emphasis on the economic, political and cultural aspects for the American Civilization Program. He will return to Longwood in February.

MR. W. H. BURKE

Mr. William Hallowell Burke, 78 died Thursday at Veteran's Hospital, Kecoughtan, Virginia, following an illness of several months. He was born August 26, 1876, at Appomattox, Virginia, son of the late Richard Floyd and Alice Sears Burke.

Until his retirement several years ago, he was with the Civil Engineering Department of the Norfolk & Western Railway at their general offices in Roanoke. Mr. Burke was a veteran of the Spanish-American War and World War I.

He is survived by a daughter Mrs. Burke Bowers, and a son, Richard F. Burke, both of Salem, Virginia; two sisters, Mrs. James B. Abbitt, Mrs. William T. Steele; and two brothers, Richard L. and Jerry A., all of Appomattox, Virginia.

Graveside services were conducted at 4:00 P. M. Saturday in Liberty Cemetery, by Dr. Carl A. Collins, Jr. and Dr. Twyman Williams.

Military services were participated in by American Legion Post 104 of Appomattox.

Pallbearers included: Gibson Maxwell, William T. Steele, Jr.; Jerry A. Burke, Jr.; William W. Burke Richard L. Burke, Jr., and R. F. Burke Steele.

Commission at State Fair

The Game Commission's outdoor scene, with its waterfall, moss-circled trout pool with brooks and rainbows, live quail and a fawn, and trapper's cabin with guns, powder horns and trophies, drew steady crowds at the Atlantic Rural Exposition Sept. 24 - Oct. 8.

Much attention was attracted too by the Commission's collection of skins — bear, deer, otter, beaver natural and sheared; fox, bobcat, and 'possum, displayed at the trapper's cabin along the cedar fence.

Commission publications were distributed and countless questions on conservation, hunting, and fishing in Virginia, were answered by special services officers, game wardens, and Education Division personnel

NEWSPAPERS WERE HIS ONLY SCHOOL AND HIS HOMEWORK

(A National Newspaper Week feature)

"Newspapers have been my only source of education . . the daily newspaper has been my homework."

When Peter Zarcone came to America in 1920, an immigrant and a cripple, he opened a small cobbler shop. Today he operates his own shoe store in Clifton, N. J.

As a young man, Zarcone had no time for school. He learned on his own. Recently he wrote a letter to The Herald-News, Passaic-Clifton, N. J., telling what newspaper had meant to him:

"The other day a friend . . asked me, 'Where did you learn to write? How did you find time to go to school? What kind of books do you read?'

"Fact is that earning a living in my business has been too pressing to give me time for school or to read books. For over 30 years newspapers have been my only source of education. Ever since my mother taught me the ABC's before I came to America, and except for a few seasons of evening school, where I learned the American way of life, the daily newspaper has been my home work.

"Reading the newspaper with the help of a dictionary has enabled me to enrich my mind with wonderful words not found in primary schools. Not only has the newspaper taught me reading and writing, but it has given me bits of jeweled knowledge about geography and people in every corner of the world.

"Though I don't always agree with the newspaper, it has, on the contrary to what some people think, taught me how to think for myself, for which millions of people all over the world would give their lives.

"It has also taught me the psychology of individuals, making it possible to understand people, to get along with them, and to learn about life's meaning.

"Some people hate newspapers on the grounds that they are partisan, prejudiced and because they print things the individuals don't like. Yet, they keep on beefing, but rarely do they take the pains to write letters to protest. Like the citizen who neglects to vote, they nullify the right of freedom of opinion.

"Too often people, in concentrating on the dramatic news and controversial subjects, overlook the little stories of human interest, the educational hints, the writings of great humanitarians, the exposing of racketeers, the rise and fall of men, the sad story to touch the souls of men, or the humorous ones to lighten the heavy heart.

"Throwing a beam of light into the dark corners of ignorance, bringing out the evils of a community, guarding the rights of people are only a few of the things which, as I see it, a newspaper gives us for a few pennies a day.

"Regardless what paper one chooses, you will find what you are looking for all wrapped up in the newspaper. Be it a weekly or a daily, from a metropolis or small town, whether it weighs 10 pounds or a few ounces, so long as it's written by men dedicated to the welfare of the community and humanity, there's always something to gain from it."

INDUSTRIAL FACE OF U. S. IS RAPIDLY CHANGING

Flexibility and initiative, so characteristic of the American scene since the nation's earliest days, have brought big changes in the industrial face of the United States in recent years.

Aided by an equal mobility of investment capital, in which the people's rapidly-growing thrift institutions have been playing such an important part, these changes have opened up jobs and opportunities in many areas of the country where progress had been limited before.

Economy Strengthened

The resulting geographical diversification of production on a national scale has not only strengthened the economic base of the nation but has made it less vulnerable as well.

Steel provides a significant example of a big change that has occurred in the location of production facilities. Steel capacity has grown by more than a third in the last decade, and is now more than double what it was in the Middle Twenties. Proportionally more of this expansion has occurred in the Middle West, the South and the Far West than in the traditional steelmaking center of Pittsburgh and the Middle Atlantic States area. In fact, though the capacity of the Pittsburgh area has grown considerably, it has now been superseded in the No. 1 steel production spot by the Chicago District.

A major decentralization of production has been taking place in automobiles as manufacturers have been setting up new assembly plants in various parts of the country. Michigan still retains its position as the country's biggest producer of passenger cars, but its lead has been declining. In the last year alone Michigan's proportion of total automobile production dropped from around 36 per cent to less than 31 per cent, according to estimates of Automobile News. At the same time, gains in the proportion of passenger car production in the period occurred in such widely scattered states as Missouri, New Jersey, Georgia, New York, Kansas, Texas and Illinois.

Other Industrial Examples

Similar examples of geographical changes in production that have occurred in the last generation can be found in the records of many other industries, including petroleum chemicals, paper, machinery, textiles, and electricity output. And the rapid development of atomic energy as a source of power seems certain to bring more changes in the future.

These devolpments on the production front are the result of a number of factors, among which can be listed population growth and its creation of new markets, labor supply in various areas, transportation cost, and the changing source of raw materials. Taxation has played a big part, too. A powerful assist has also come from the mobility of capital, as evidenced by the trend of life insurance investments over recent years.

Taking the country as a whole, the figures show that the biggest comparative gains in non-agricultural production occurred in the South, the Southwest and the Far West in the last decade and a half. Indicative of this trend is a study made by the U. S. Department of Labor which shows that non-agricultural employment in these areas increased substantially more than in the country as a whole between 1939 and 1953.

VE ERADICATION PROGRAM IS NOW IN FULL SWING

The program to eradicate vesicular exathema (VE) in swine in Virginia is showing marked progress.

Federal and state veterinarians who are concerned with the regulations on feeding of raw garbage, and VPI veterinarians who are collaborating on an educational program, report:

Before last December there had been 18 outbreaks involving 6,081 head of swine valued at $210,260. This year there have been only two —one in January and one in April.

This decrease in outbreaks is closely related with the decrease in the number of swine fed raw garbage. In June, only 3,625 swine were reported as eating raw garbage, as compared to 11,829 in January.

Raw garbage is one of the primary sources of spreading the disease, which is characterized by the formation of lesions, usually on the feet, snout, or both.

There are nine lay inspectors and one veterinarian, Dr. W. L. Wake, as supervisor of the eradication program.

Dr. Wake says there must be constant watchfulness against the disease. Each infected animal becomes a reservoir of the VE virus. As the reservoirs develop and accumulate the source of the virus becomes tremendous. "In many cases we have learned both in human and animal diseases that some diseases which appear harmless in the beginning can develop into very dangerous ones, such as foot-and-mouth in animals, and influenza that killed so many people during the first world war," he says.

Futrehmore, eradication will eliminate the economic drain on hog raisers that results from loss of weight of marketable swine. Since VE masks foot-and-mouth, each new outbreak must be diagnosed correctly to eliminate the danger of the latter disease. If the country were free of VE it would be easier to keep out foot-and-mouth.

House hunters will have an easier chore this fall. New house prices will stay level, but you can expect to get more for your money. The "more" will be more equipment (dishwashers, garbage grinders, air conditioners) and space. The trend is toward three and four bedroom houses with basements —Cha.nging Times.
